

REMEMBERS WHEN

LESSON 11 WORKSHEET

GETTING FEEDBACK

Title

Thank you for taking the time to read my memoir and give me feedback. This is a very important part of the writing process, but I know that it may be difficult to provide feedback when just asked “Well, what do you think?” So I have some specific questions I’d like to ask. Also, feel free to correct my spelling or punctuation if you see errors!

If you have heard me tell the story before, what did I leave out that I usually say or that I should have said?

What did I include in the story that made it confusing or wasn’t really relevant or interesting?

At what points did it not sound like me telling a story to family and friends? Where did I lose my “voice?”

What are some other experiences you know I’ve had that you think I should write about?

Thank you again for helping make my writing “memoir-able!”

You’ll find more great resources and a place to publish and read memoirs at <http://rememberswhen.com>.