

REMEMBERS WHEN

LESSON 4 WORKSHEET

Title

THE MORAL OF THE STORY

This is where you get to tell what you learned. Above, fill in your title from your Lesson 2 Worksheet. Later, as you write additional memoirs, you'll see why it is important to be able to quickly identify worksheets related to a specific memoir.

WRITE A LAST SENTENCE

The last sentence should capture the essence of what you learned. Ask yourself, "What was the point?" Write down the moral of the story that you wrote in the last box on Worksheet B. Of course, you can reword it if you'd like.

Moral

Test the sentence you just wrote in the box above by reading it aloud. How does it sound? Does it set the right tone? Does it capture the point of the story? In the spaces below rewrite the sentence one or two more times, paring it down to what is really important. Use additional paper, if necessary, until you are satisfied.

Revision 1

Revision 2

When you have a strong closing sentence (even if it is not perfect), write it in the box below. For now, don't work on any other part of your memoir, no matter how tempting that might seem.
